I have one collection like this: public ICollection Persons { get; set; } I have also added the default functionality to the Person class, such as the following: [Required] public int Id { get; set; } My problem is that I want to know if the Id of any of the Persons is already in use. So I added the following: public ICollection Persons { get; set; } public bool IsExistInPersons(int id){ //code here } Is there a way to do this? A: from a search perspective, you can use linq queries. for example: bool isExistInPersons(int id){ return persons.Select(p => p.Id).Contains(id); } If you want to find all ids you can use this method: IEnumerable allExistPersonIds(){ return persons.Select(p => p.Id); } “My personal bias for a long time was the safety benefit of these regulations. Over time, my thinking has evolved to the point where I don’t think they are a net benefit,” said Reactor Safety Board Chairman John Flanagan, a nuclear engineer. “What the public needs to be aware of, and regulators need to be aware of, is that these regulations are going to be very costly.” The NRC staff is now working with an outside consultant to evaluate the proposed changes, including the new construction and operating license. The agency hopes to have the first phase of this work completed by the middle of next year. Energia said the costs for the regulatory changes are expected to be close to $10 million. This is based on a cost estimate that, when completed, will be included in the PAPR regulatory changes. “The project would need to be completed within one year,” said Reactor Safety Board member Joe Mascarelli. “So, if it
