ConcurrentHashMap on MacOS X that keeps ordering? If I create a ConcurrentHashMap instance on Mac OS X does it keep the hash code based ordering of the underlying LinkedHashMap? In other words is it safe to expect that the map will return the objects in order of key's hashCode when you do a get? To be clearer, does the following code show that? import java.util.*; import static java.util.Arrays.*; public class Test { public static void main(String[] args) { ConcurrentHashMap map = new
System.out.println(Arrays.toString(map.keySet().toArray())); Integer value = map.get("key1"); System.out.println(value); value
System.out.println(Arrays.toString(map.keySet().toArray())); } } See here: A: It is not guaranteed, but usually it will. Even
